Rottweilers are stocky dogs with the confidence of a block. Their massive heads make them the perfect protection and guard dog, ready for anything. There's very little that Rottweilers fear, and when it comes to loyalty and protection, they'll go the extra mile to ensure the safety of those they respect and love.

ROTTWEILER ORIGIN

Rottweilers seem to have been descended from cattle-driving dogs. They were left behind by the Roman legions in a familiar-sounding place called Rottweil, Germany, when the Romans abandoned Germany in the 2nd-Century CE.

Here are some fast facts about the Rottweiler's history:

- ✓ Rottweilers were once 'Roman Drover Dogs'. When the Romans journeyed across Europe, they made exceptional use of herd dogs to drive and guard cattle.
- ✓ Rottweilers are named after a town in Germany. Rottweil is where these amazing dogs get their names from.
- ✓ Rottweilers nearly became extinct. The near-extinction of the Rottweiler is normally always blamed on industrialisation. This is because, without cattle, the dogs were hardly needed for anything.
- ✓ Rottweilers are well-known in fiction. 'The Good Dog Carl' book series for children is about a Rottweiler which many kids are familiar with today.

ROTTWEILER PERSONALITY

Rottweilers are well known for their unpredictable and aggressive nature towards unrecognised human beings, naturally lending themselves to the position of protective guard dogs. As dominant personalities, they are often found to be unsociable with other dog species unless they're accustomed to the company of other dogs from a young age. Guidance and nurturing are often good methods of upbringing to ensure their cooperativeness and sociability.

Here are some of the key personality traits of Rottweilers

- ✔ Protective - As dominant animals, they are naturally protective of their loved ones. Their build is also well-paired with this trait.
- ✔ Cooperative - Rottweilers, although rugged animals, can be incredibly cooperative and sociable if they're exposed to the right upbringing, much like any other dog species.
- ✔ Independent - Rottweilers are known as independent dogs and, if left to their own devices, will occupy themselves with whatever they find suitable. So make sure your shoes don't lie around.
- ✔ Intelligent - Rottweilers are intelligent animals and are ranked 9th in terms of the most intelligent dog breeds.

ROTTWEILER APPEARANCE

Rottweilers are large dogs with muscular and lean bodies, able to endure great athletic feats with ease. Their colours sit within the darker ranges of the scale and are most commonly found to be brown or black. They showcase square muzzles with loose lips, often drooling wherever they walk. No small noise will ever pass them by because their straight and upright ears pick up sounds from very far away.

Here's a quick run-through of the Rottweiler's most defining features:

- ✔ Large-bodied - Rottweilers are large - This is often why people get Rottweilers as guard dogs because they can look intimidating and can surely pack a big bite on unwanted guests.
- ✔ Muscular - Rottweilers have a muscular build that showcases itself as hard-earned to any passer-by.
- ✔ Droopy Lips - A Rottweiler's droopy lips can sometimes make them look a bit silly, with long spit strings often found hanging off, giving their appearance a soft touch.

Rottweiler coat colours are known to come in:

Black and brown - Rottweilers are predominantly black with brown faces, paws, and chests.

Brown - The brown colour comes in a variety of shades, those shades being tan, mahogany, and rust.

ADOPTING A ROTTWEILER

There are many Rottweilers for sale, but it's always important to remember a few things. When looking for Rottweiler Breeders in Australia, have a lookout for these specific things:

- ✔ It's in your best interest to look out for breeders who have good reviews as well as a longstanding history.
- ✔ Look out for breeders who don't often have litters available. This is indicative that the breeder has taken the right precautions concerning the breeding of Rottweilers.
- ✔ Breeders who are knowledgeable about Rottweilers. These breeders should know almost everything there is to know about Rottweilers.
- ✔ Breeders who would like you to meet your new Rottweiler's parents.

A list of responsible dog breeders can be found here while using this guide when looking for a breeder you can trust.

It may seem better to go to a shelter when wanting to adopt a Rottweiler, but shelters usually only consist of adult dogs, and purebreds are more challenging to find, but there are always exceptions. Adopting through a shelter or rescue should be considered when:

- ✔ In search of an older dog. Adult Rottweilers have already matured in training; they adapt to their new homes more efficiently than any puppy Rottweiler would.
- ✔ You consider giving a puppy another chance at a comfortable life. There are plenty of adorable dogs in need of a home around the country.
